Background

Anne is the Major Gifts Officer at PATH, an international nonprofit global health organization headquartered in Seattle. During her five-year career in development, she has also worked for FaithTrust Institute and Earth Ministry. Her first career was as a science editor and manager of biomedical communications at Immunex Corporation, where she also co-founded the Northwest Chapter of the American Medical Writers Association and served as its first president. She currently sits on the Advisory Committee for the Clinical Pastoral Education program at Veterans Affairs Puget Sound.

Education

Master of Arts in Pastoral Studies, School of Theology and Ministry, Seattle University
Bachelor of Arts in English Literature, University of Washington

Favorite Things

Anne's superpower is being able to feed eight hungry teenagers out of her pantry, and her number one rule is, "You don't leave my house hungry." She is most happy when her house is full, and she is also most happy alone in her house reading a good novel. A Seattle native, she takes pride in having worked solely for organizations homegrown in Seattle. One of her greatest joys is sitting knee-to-knee with donors and learning why they are passionate about the organizations they support.
