Background

Jodie Miner currently serves as Director for Philanthropy with UW Medicine Advancement, where she is responsible for securing major gift support for several departments in UW Medicine. Prior to joining UW Medicine, she worked with the national office of NPower and with several arts organizations in Alaska including Out North, the Anchorage Festival of Music, and Anchorage Community Theatre. Ms. Miner completed her Bachelor of Arts in Music at the University of Oregon and a Master of Public Administration from the University of Alaska Anchorage.

Favorite Things

In my spare time I love to hike, kayak and cross country ski with my husband, David and our daughter. My small claim to fame is that I once took a solo bicycle trip from Colorado to the southern tip of South America (13,000 miles).
